Indoor Activities:

- Write the letters of the alphabet on large index cards, card stock or construction paper. Then arrange them in a large circle on the floor, in mixed up order. Turn on some music and have child dance around the circle. When the music stops, the child must stop. Identify the letter they stopped near, provide the sound it makes and share at least one word that begins with that sound.

Outdoor Activities

- Sticks and stones don't only break bones; they can also assist kids in developing their motor skills, Scholastic states. Gather a variety of twigs/sticks and small rocks and use them to form letters with your child. Kids can spell out their own names or other words and messages.
